Today's new video is about Mio Land – the first video game I ever owned. I was nine years old and it was a “supertoy”, much smaller than the other games in the series. The casing was slightly larger than a pack of cards, and it was only playable for two weeks. But... The world Mio Land is beautiful. The characters are cute. The graphics are just wonderful. The music is amazing. Mio Land taught me how to ride a bike. I learned about patience. I learned about happiness and the importance of playing with friends. And, one of the best things about the game, besides that it taught me patience, is that it taught me about the importance of friendship. I played Mio Land with my best friend, and we spent a lot of time together in my room, and we were so good friends at that time. And it was a great time for us, and we also learned about the importance of friendship with the game. And even today, whenever I feel sad or lonely, I always think back to that time with my friend, and it helps a lot. Mio Land 2 (1998) – The second game in the series
